The best thing I ever did was to divide the store into sections and the students became section managers. They are responsible for merchandising their section, as well as product selection, stocking and cleaning. The student also takes inventory monthly and contributes his/her part to the monthly inventory report. This report shows the difference between book and physical inventory, and always proves to be a lesson in inventory management, as well as accuracy in counting and record keeping.

One of my favorite things to do is have a Parent's Night the first of November for the Cardinal Kroger Staff. The students speak about their job, the parents tour the store and refreshments are catered. The parents get to see the store in action and the students get to brag on their positions. It's great for both, plus the store gets a good cleaning.
